BMI Political Risk Ratings	9
Domestic Politics.....	10
Early Elections Increasingly Likely
Lithuania's political risk profile remains tenuous at this juncture, with the Baltic country scoring only 69.6 out of 100 under our proprietary short-term political risk ratings.
Long-Term Political Outlook	11
Convergence By No Means Assured
While Lithuania's long-term political outlook remains among the most stable in the emerging Europe region, we nevertheless caution that the country's convergence with Western political and economic institutions through 2019 is by no means assured.

Chapter 2: Economic Outlook	15
SWOT Analysis	15
BMI Economic Risk Ratings	15
Economic Activity	16
Second Consecutive Full-Year Recession Still In Play
We maintain our view that Lithuania will be unable to avoid a second consecutive full-year recession and have pencilled in real GDP growth of -0.3% for 2010 accordingly.
TABLE: ECONOMIC ACTIVITY	16
Balance Of Payments.....	18
Current Account Will Remain In Surplus In 2010
We project Lithuania's current account posting its second consecutive full-year surplus in 2010, coming in at 0.6% of GDP by end-year (compared with 1.2% in 2009).
TABLE: BALANCE OF PAYMENTS (EURO).....	18
Monetary Policy	19
Deflation Has Further To Run
We maintain our core view that deflation in Lithuania will remain firmly in play through the first half of 2010, as the economy's ongoing 'internal devaluation' forces wages, output and prices to adjust to the downside.

Banking Sector	20
Muddling Through 2010
Our core view on Lithuania's banking sector remains unchanged, with the industry set to enter a prolonged period of low growth and weak profitability going forward.

Chapter 3: 10-Year Forecast	27
The Lithuanian Economy To 2019	27
Solid Growth, But Less Fear Of Overheating Over Long Term
Although the outlook for the Lithuanian economy over the course of 2010 is certainly less than inspiring, we nonetheless maintain a positive view for the economy over the long term.
